The purpose of the Protocol is to reorganize the International Hydrographic Organization (the “IHO”) in order to make it a more modern, efficient, and effective organization. Specifically, the reorganization is intended to streamline the IHO’s decision-making process, simplify the current membership application procedure, allow the organization to keep pace with rapidly changing technological developments in the field of hydrography, clarify the function of the various subsidiary organs that make up the organization, and solidify the IHO’s role as the leading international hydrographic organization in the world.

II. BACKGROUND

The United States officially joined the forerunner of the IHO, the International Hydrographic Bureau, on June 20, 1922, pursuant to Congressional authorization contained in the Diplomatic and Consular Service Appropriation Act of March 2, 1921 (22 U.S.C. § 275). The International Hydrographic Bureau was established to make navigation easier and safer throughout the world, but the Bureau encountered administrative problems because it lacked the international legal status of an intergovernmental organization. As a result, the Convention on the International Hydrographic Organization, done at Monaco on May 3, 1967 (the “1967 Convention”), was concluded in order to provide a treaty basis for the International Hydrographic Bureau, giving it the international legal status of an intergovernmental organization. The 1967 Convention entered into force for the United States on September 22, 1970. The IHO is headquartered in the Principality of Monaco and over 80 countries are members of the Organization.

The 1967 Convention did not change the mission of the Organization; the Bureau simply became the executive body of the new IHO. As described in President Johnson’s Letter of Transmittal to the Senate on October 24, 1967, the primary objective of the Bureau, and hence the IHO, was to “make navigation easier and safer throughout the world” and to do so by “coordinating the activities of national hydrographic offices, promoting uniformity in their nautical charts and documents and encouraging adoption of reliable and efficient hydrographic surveying methods.”

To this day, the mission of the organization has remained the same, but the nature of the day-to-day work of the organization has changed dramatically. Technological developments not only in the field of hydrography and nautical cartography, but throughout the maritime transportation industry, including Global Positioning System (GPS) navigation and electronic charts, have led to a need for greater accuracy in hydrographic surveys and the compilation of digital nautical charts and documents, as well as improved coverage to facilitate today’s maritime traffic. Moreover, increased international commerce over the many years since the Bureau was originally established has led to the involvement of more countries in maritime transportation and a greater need for international cooperation. As currently organized and in this era of constantly evolving technology, the IHO is having difficulty keeping up with this increasing and rapidly shifting flow of work. As noted in the Submittal Letter from the Secretary of State, “weaknesses, which include slow decision-making processes, slow growth in membership, and inadequate interaction with other international organizations and industry, [are] affecting the IHO’s ability to execute its mandate effectively.” The Protocol would amend the 1967 Convention and reorganize the institution so as to address these weaknesses, as described below.
III. MAJOR PROVISIONS

A detailed analysis of the Protocol may be found in the Letter of Submittal from the Secretary of State to the President, which is reprinted in full in Treaty Document 110–9. A summary of the key provisions of the Protocol is set forth below.

1. New Organizational Structure

The new organizational structure set forth in the Protocol is intended to make the organization capable of being more responsive to Member States' needs and rapidly changing technology. In sum, the IHO would meet more frequently, and would have new subsidiary organs that are capable of overseeing the operation of the organization between meetings of the States Parties. The specifics are described below.

What is currently referred to as the “International Hydrographic Conference” or “Conference” and is composed of representatives of every country that is a member of the IHO, would be renamed the “Assembly” under the amended Convention. See Article 4 of the Protocol. The Assembly would meet more frequently than the current Conference—every three years, instead of every five years. See Article 5 of the Protocol. The “International Hydrographic Bureau” would be renamed the “Secretariat,” but this would not affect the substance of its activities within the IHO. See Article 4 of the Protocol. A new organ, the “Council,” would be established and the Assembly would be empowered to establish additional subsidiary organs, as needed. See Articles 4 and 5 of the Protocol.

The establishment of a Council is perhaps the most dramatic change. The Council is to be made up of one-fourth, but not less than thirty, of the Member States. Two-thirds of the Council members are to be selected on a regional basis and the remaining one-third is to be selected “on the basis of hydrographic interests, which shall be defined in the General Regulations.” See Article 6 of the Protocol. The current International Hydrographic Conference of States Parties has adopted General Regulations that will have effect if and when the Protocol enters into force. See Annex II. These Regulations provide that “the scale by which an interest in hydrographic matters is measured shall be national flag tonnage” and thus, the top 10 Member States on the tonnage listing kept by the IHO will have a seat on the Council. The U.S. tonnage, which has been reported to the IHO, currently stands at 24,139,848 tons. This tonnage places the United States fifth among IHO Member States and as a result, the United States is assured a seat on the Council, at least for now (The four countries that precede the United States in tonnage are as follows: China (43,790,000); the United Kingdom (31,189,390); Greece (30,881,988); and Singapore (30,451,188)). The Regulations provide that this definition will be reconsidered at the second Assembly meeting and because the Assembly would meet in ordinary session every three years, it appears that this definition will remain in place for at least the first few years.
2. Clarification of the Objectives of the IHO and the Functions of Its Subsidiary Organs

Article 2 of the Protocol would amend Article II of the 1967 Convention by providing greater detail of the objectives of the IHO than currently outlined in the Convention. The new provision makes it clear that the object of the Organization is to facilitate coordination of the activities of national hydrographic offices, promote uniformity in nautical charts and documents, adopt reliable and efficient methods of carrying out hydrographic surveys, and foster the development of sciences in the field of hydrography and the techniques employed in descriptive oceanography.

Article 5 of the Protocol sets forth in considerably more detail the functions of the Assembly (composed of representatives of every country that is a member of the IHO), which would include making decisions regarding “the overall policy, strategy, and work programme” of the Organization; approving the three-year budget of the Organization; making decisions regarding the operational services of the Organization; delegating, where appropriate and necessary, responsibilities to the Council; and establishing subsidiary organs of the Organization.

Article 6 of the Protocol describes the structure, composition, functions, and working methods of the Council. The Council will meet at least once a year and will, among other things, coordinate activities of the Organization during the period between Assembly sessions; report to the Assembly at each ordinary session on the work of the Organization; prepare proposals, with the support of the Secretary-General, on the overall strategy and work program to be adopted by the Assembly; and propose to the Assembly the establishment of subsidiary organs.

Article 7 of the Protocol would amend Article VII of the Convention concerning the Finance Committee. Article 7 provides that the Finance Committee is open to all Member States and clarifies the functions of the Finance Committee, which would include reviewing financial statements, budget estimates and reports on administrative matters prepared by the Secretary-General.

Article 8 of the Protocol amends Article VIII of the Convention, which describes the functions of the Bureau, which would be renamed the “Secretariat.” The new Article VIII would clarify the role of this organ, making it clear that it is largely administrative.

3. Simplification of the Membership Application Procedure

Article 17 of the Protocol would amend Article XX of the 1967 Convention to make it easier for States that are members of the United Nations to become a party to the Convention. Currently, under Article XX of the Convention, a maritime State that wishes to accede to the Convention must have its admission approved by two-thirds of the Member States of the Organization. The executive branch has informed the committee that it can take three or more years to become a member in accordance with Article XX. The new amended version of Article XX would eliminate this cumbersome process and instead provide that any State that is a member of the United Nations may accede to the Convention by simply depositing an instrument of accession with the Depositary.
4. Decision-Making Procedures

Article 9 of the Protocol would amend Article IX of the 1967 Convention by replacing language that previously described the composition of the Bureau, which would now be referred to as the “Secretariat,” with provisions on the decision-making process of the Organization. Although these procedures were not included in the 1967 Convention, the Secretary of State’s Letter of Submission states that this provision would simply codify existing practice. In brief, Article 9 provides that Member States should try to reach decisions by consensus. When it is not possible to reach a consensus, decisions on matters related to the policy or finances of the Organization, including amendments to the General and Financial Regulations, shall be taken by a two-thirds majority of Member States present and voting. All other decisions on which it is not possible to reach a consensus shall be taken by a simple majority of Member States present and voting.

IV. General and Financial Regulations

Annexed to the 1967 Convention are General Regulations and Financial Regulations, which govern much of the day-to-day functioning of the IHO and implement the broad structure provided for in the Convention. These Annexes, in accordance with Article XI, do not form an integral part of the Convention and they can be amended without the Senate’s advice and consent. Nevertheless, they are important to the Senate’s consideration of the Convention and the Protocol, as they include details regarding the functioning of the Organization that are not included in the underlying treaties. These Annexes were transmitted to the Senate for its information in 1967, but have undergone a number of changes over the years. The most recent version of the Regulations, which include amendments that were adopted as recently as 2007, are attached at Annex I. In addition, at the XVIIth International Hydrographic Conference, which took place in 2007, the parties of the 1967 Convention adopted draft Regulations that are to take effect upon the entry into force of the Protocol. These new Regulations are attached at Annex II.

V. Entry Into Force

The Protocol, in accordance with Article XXI (c) of the 1967 Convention, will enter into force for all Contracting States to the 1967 Convention three months after notifications of approval by two-thirds of the Member States have been received by the Depositary. At the time the Protocol was adopted, 80 States were party to the 1967 Convention and as a result, the Protocol will enter into force for all Contracting States to the 1967 Convention, including the United States, three months after notifications of approval by 54 Member States have been received by the Depositary. As of June 15, 2008, 19 States had approved the Protocol.

VI. Denunciation

Article 19 of the Protocol would amend Article XXII of the 1967 Convention, which provides for denunciation of (or withdrawal from) the Convention. A party to the Convention may denounce the Convention by giving notice to the Depositary, but the denunciation shall not take effect for at least a year, that is “upon 1 January next following the expiration of the notice.” In other words, if a party were to denounce the Convention on March 1, 2008 with one year’s notice, the denunciation of the Convention would take effect on January 1, 2010.

VII. COMMITTEE ACTION

On April 22, 2008, the committee considered the Protocol, and ordered it favorably reported by voice vote, with a quorum present and without objection.

VIII. COMMITTEE RECOMMENDATION AND COMMENTS

The Committee on Foreign Relations believes that the mission of the IHO advances important U.S. national security and economic interests and thus, the Protocol, which would enable the IHO to develop into a more efficient and effective organization, also serves U.S. interests.

Accurate and comprehensive navigation data is crucial to the operation of the U.S. Navy, the Coast Guard, and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. In addition, the United States has a strong economic interest in facilitating and improving the safety of maritime transportation throughout the world. According to the U.S. Department of Transportation, over 29 percent of all U.S. exports and over 52 percent of all U.S. imports were transported by ship in 2006. According to the Committee on the Marine Transportation System, established pursuant to a directive by the President in the U.S. Ocean Action Plan, issued December 17, 2004, the United States ports and waterways handle more than 2 billion tons of both domestic and foreign commerce each year. The American Association of Port Authorities, using figures from 2006, calculates that the United States deep-draft seaports and seaport-related businesses generated approximately 8.4 million American jobs and added nearly two trillion dollars to the U.S. economy.

The IHO accomplishes its mission of facilitating and improving the safety of maritime transportation through the sharing of hydrographic information, the development of uniform standards for charting and hydrographic surveying, the coordination of national hydrographic office activities, and by fostering the development of sciences in the field of hydrography, including the techniques employed in descriptive oceanography. Moreover, the IHO is cost-effective. U.S. assessed contributions were $113,000 for calendar year 2005, $120,000 for calendar year 2006, and $118,000 for calendar year 2007. The anticipated assessed U.S. contribution for calendar year 2008 is $143,000. The executive branch has informed the committee that it does not expect a significant increase in the U.S. assessed contribution to the IHO after the Protocol enters into force. In part, this is due to an anticipated increase in its membership, which would spread the cost of the budget among more Member States and should lead to a decrease in the size of the U.S. contribution.
The committee urges the Senate to act promptly to give advice and consent to ratification of the Protocol, as set forth in this report and the accompanying resolution of advice and consent.

IX. TEXT OF RESOLUTION OF ADVICE AND CONSENT TO RATIFICATION

Resolved (two-thirds of the Senators present concurring therein),

The Senate advises and consents to the ratification of the Protocol of Amendments to the Convention on the International Hydrographic Organization done at Monaco on April 14, 2005 (Treaty Doc. 110–9).

In considering the budget estimates, the Finance Committee shall make necessary recommendations for adjusting anticipated income and expenditure in order to ensure the financial stability of the Organization. Those recommendations which include an increase in the level of contributions or in the total level of current operating costs higher than approved by the Conference in the 5-yearly budget shall be referred by the Directing Committee to Member Governments for approval by a two-thirds majority. Other recommendations on the annual budget will be submitted by the Directing Committee to Member Governments for their comments and approval by a two-thirds majority of votes received within three months of the dispatch date of the letter seeking comments and approval.

(c) Contribution adjustments shall be made by altering the share value, effective from 1 January of the following year.

ARTICLE 9

Transfers of credit may be permitted in order to modify the amount of the appropriation of various chapters. They must not result in the creation of new chapters.

The Directing Committee may make transfers of credit provided that such transfers do not exceed 10% of the total appropriation of any one of the chapters concerned. Such transfers shall be reported, with the necessary justification, in the financial section of the Annual Report.

Transfers of larger amounts shall require prior authorization by the Finance Committee.

XII. ANNEX III.—RESPONSES TO QUESTIONS SUBMITTED BY SENATOR BIDEN

Question. Please provide a list of recent accomplishments of the International Hydrographic (IHO) Organization that are significant.

Answer. Recent significant accomplishments of the International Hydrographic Organization (IHO) include:

• Development of standards for digital hydrographic data, which provides for expanded use of marine geospatial data, beyond the traditional safety-of-navigation purposes, to better support mapping of critical habitats and natural resources, marine research, protection and monitoring of the marine environment, and sustainable use of the world’s oceans, coasts, and fisheries.

• Development of the first internationally accepted standards for Electronic Navigational Charts (ENCs), which will be used in Electronic Chart Display and Information Systems (ECDIS) by all major seagoing vessels as navigation transitions from paper to electronic chart navigation over the next few years. The IHO standards provide international interoperability for electronic chart data and improve the safety and efficiency of maritime navigation. Safety is improved through continuous display of ship location in relation to standard IHO symbols. Efficiency of marine navigation is being improved through IHO work with its Member States and commercial system providers to expand the system capability in support of the mariner.

• Establishment of a Capacity Building Committee to develop and implement plans and foster regional cooperative efforts to assist developing coastal States in acquiring the ability to collect digital hydrographic data and produce electronic charts.

• Evaluation of the current status of worldwide electronic chart coverage, and the actions necessary to improve the scope of such coverage

Question. Please provide a list of current and future priorities of the International Hydrographic Organization that are worthy of note.

Answer. The current and future priorities of the International Hydrographic Organization include:

• Expansion of the Navigation Warning system into the Arctic region for improved maritime safety in response to increased shipping within this region.

• Development of the next generation of electronic chart standards to include 3D data, and integration of ice, tides, currents, and meteorology data into the electronic chart display.
• Assisting Member States with their production of Electronic Navigational Charts, which are essential for the future deployment of Electronic Chart Display and Information Systems. Such assistance might include training and guidance regarding international hydrographic and charting standards and identifying voluntary resources to support developing country hydrographic offices in acquiring and expanding their production capabilities.

• Collaboration with other organizations in the development of policies and standards for nautical products that facilitate the safe passage of all vessels, including military ones, through domestic and international waters.

• Expanding IHO membership, thereby increasing collection of hydrographic data and production of nautical charts to support safety of navigation and protection of the marine environment.

• The IHO recently accepted a proposal from the United States to develop a standard international format for displaying non-mandatory, supplemental marine environmental data with Electronic Navigational Charts in electronic navigation systems. This is a collaborative effort among IHO Member States, environmental organizations and agencies, military, and private industry.

Question. What was the U.S. assessed contribution to the International Hydrographic Organization for calendar years 2005, 2006, and 2007? What is the assessed contribution to the International Hydrographic Organization for calendar year 2008? Do you expect a significant increase in the U.S. assessed contribution to the International Hydrographic Organization in future years, if the Protocol enters into force?

Answer. The U.S. assessed contributions to the International Hydrographic Organization for calendar years 2005, 2006 and 2007 were as follows: $113,000 for calendar year 2005; $120,000 for calendar year 2006; and $118,000 for calendar year 2007.

The anticipated assessed U.S. contribution for calendar year 2008 is $143,000, which may increase as a result of the weakening dollar. IHO budgets are based on the Euro.

The United States does not expect a significant increase in the U.S. assessed contribution to the IHO when the Protocol enters into force. Entry into force of the Protocol will facilitate the reorganization of the IHO, which will result in a more efficient and responsive organization and attendant cost-savings. In addition, the amendments will simplify the process for increasing IHO membership, and an increased membership should obviate the need to increase assessed contributions to current members, including the United States. Under the current Convention, it could take 3 or more years to gain the necessary 2/3 approval for admission as a new Member State, whereas amendments to the Convention will authorize any State that is a member of the United Nations to become a member by simply depositing its instrument of accession to the Convention with the Depositary.

Question. Please provide to the Committee a copy of the current Financial Regulations of the International Hydrographic Organization and the current General Regulations of the International Hydrographic Organization. When were these regulations adopted by the International Hydrographic Organization?

Answer. Copies of the current Financial Regulations and General Regulations of the International Hydrographic Organization are attached at Tab A [Annex I of this Report]. The current Financial Regulations incorporate amendments that were adopted in 2003. The current General Regulations incorporate amendments to Article 6 of the regulations, which were adopted in 2007 at the XVIIth International Hydrographic Conference.

The XVIIth Conference also adopted amendments to the Financial Regulations and additional amendments to the General Regulations, whose implementation is subject to the entry into force of the Protocol. These amendments will serve the same purpose as the Protocol, which is to facilitate implementation of IHO’s reorganization. Copies of the Financial Regulations and General Regulations that will take effect upon entry into force of the Protocol are attached at Tab B [Annex II of this Report].

Question. How many people are currently employed by the International Hydrographic Organization?

Answer. The International Hydrographic Bureau, which serves as the secretariat of the IHO, employs 19 individuals. It is led by a Directing Committee that is comprised of a President and two Directors, who are nominated by the IHO Member States and elected by the Conference for 5-year terms. The remaining 16 staff includes 5 professional technical assistants for cartography, publications, digital standards, hydrography and administration, and 11 staff for translation, finance, digital cartography/graphics and administration/communications. Since 1997, the IHO has reduced its staff by 2 despite a steadily increasing IHO membership.

Question. Will the United States have a seat on the newly established Council, if the Protocol enters into force?

Answer. The United States will have a seat on the newly established Council upon the Protocol’s entry into force. Under the current principles governing the composition of the Council as set out in the Protocol of Amendments and the General Regulations, seats are allocated on the bases of regional representation and hydrographic interest. The existing “hydrographic interest” basis for membership on the new Council is tonnage of shipping (all civil tonnage over 100 tons plus 6/7ths of all military tonnage). The U.S. tonnage reported to IHO currently stands at 24,139,848 tons which places the United States in 5th position among IHO Member States. The top 10 Member States on the tonnage listing will have a seat on Council. The “hydrographic interest” criterion may change in the future but all the suggested alternatives, e.g., number of charts, area of national waters, etc., would still result in the United States having a seat on Council.
